Defying the cold

PLANTS 101:

BELINDA GALLAGHER
Garden Musings

I am ever in awe of the black-capped chickadees that survive the extreme freezing weather that we experienced in the last few weeks. Birds that remain in the area for the winter have various means of survival including eating lots of calories, puffing up feathers, huddling together, huddling in tree cavities, or snow dens and regulating their body temperatures. According to the Cornell University website, All About Birds (www.allaboutbirds.org), the chickadee reduces heat loss by cooling down its feet to about negative 1 degree Celsius. The conservation of heat allows the little bird to keep its body warm enough to survive.

Woody plants, like trees and shrubs, survive the freezing temperatures in large part by going dormant – exactly what I like to do in winter. According to the National Forest Foundation, dormancy involves the living cells modifying in several ways to prevent damage from freezing. They use a combination of dehydration, sugar concentration and shrinkage. Essentially the increase in soluble sugars acts just like the antifreeze in our cars, or salt on the roads by lowering the freezing point of water. (We humans benefit from this sugar concentration when we tap the trees for syrup in late winter!)

This careful preparation for the cold doesn't always work and, lately, the natural lands around us told the story of failure. Explosive cracking and popping of splitting bark and fragmenting trees signaled that the water in the sap had frozen and expanded further than the bark could tolerate.

Non-woody plants in our gardens have their own brand of dormancy.

Spring flowering bulbs do a 'half-sleep' thing. Having dropped their green bits in late spring or early summer, the roots continue to grow, nourishing and anchoring the plants until the soil temperature drops in late fall. Like the trees and shrubs, the sugars are concentrated, which results in a lower freezing point of any liquid in the bulb.

According to Ben Rotteveel of the bulb company, Dutch Grown, "Once the bulb's dormant period has started, a little 'stopwatch' inside the bulb starts have late snow events, and hard frost in the spring – a more common occurrence than in the past due to climate change.

Perennials basically hide out. Any exposed parts die right back to the ground. Even those lovely, architectural ornamental grasses blowing in the wind are dead material from ground level up. It is the roots that survive the cold in a process called hardening.

Along with the natural sugar antifreeze already discussed, perennials move as much water as possible from the living cells in the roots into the intercellular (between the cells) spaces. As the water moves out, the 'antifreeze' becomes more concentrated. Then it is the soil temperature that governs survivability.

Fortunately, soil temperature doesn't fluctuate as much as air temperature and we have an added bonus of snow cover that insulates the soil. In fact, most perennials that succumb to cold do so when we have extreme cold before the snow flies. A couple of years ago we had a stretch of negative 25 degrees Celsius in December and I lost several typically reliable perennials like their cousins – the trees and shrubs – are rated for cold hardiness. Our county falls somewhere between Zones 4a and 4b, 4b being the warmer part of the range. You can find the Zone information on the tags that come with plants, or online at www.planthardiness.gc.ca. Plant for our Zone or a Zone colder (Zone 3). Better still, shop locally where you can find excellent advice on defying the cold.

salvia and balloon flower. Fortunately, in a normally snowy Haliburton winter, the garden experiences few losses.

We can assist our plants in their cold defiance in one very important way – purchase and plant the right plant.

Nowadays, perennials, like their cous-

Crocus even flower in the cold.

Now let's think warm. As the days get longer, the sunshine gets stronger providing nicer temperatures. This signals to plants and to gardeners that it is time to spring to life, no pun intended.

A short recognition for Haliburton County women. Area residents Sheila Ziman, from left, Elli Armstrong, and writer Janet Trull. Submitted by Janet Trull

A toast to International Women's Day

I set out alone on the cross-country ski trails at Moosewoods last Tuesday to celebrate the blue sky and the fresh snow and the hopeful feeling that spring was close at hand. I did not expect to meet so many women along the way! Turns out they were celebrating International Women's Day – Tuesday, March 8. They invited me to join them in the warm-up hut for cookies and a toast to women.

Local women continue to make positive contributions to our community. The 10 women who participated are active in Haliburton County's volunteer organizations, arts groups, and with environmental projects. They advocate for social equity and healthy lifestyles. So cheers to the grandmothers and moms and girlfriends and sisters and daughters who make our lives richer and our homes warmer and our hearts fuller. Every day!

Word sketches for a watercolour painting

The full moon, soft and not shiny, spread out over the lake, tonight ...
The first sail boat, Obsession, moored in the basin, this spring ...
I see all the night shades along the shore, from end to end, I must take note ...
The top of the long cove, just before the dip to the turnabout ...
Backdrop of pines and spruce to the water and stars and the litter of sticks on the shore.
The porch on the back of the old blue house
Where I have always wanted to have breakfast.

My cup runneth over, don'tcha know

Maybelle's Fireside stories

THERE I WAS – ol' Maybelle sitting behind the steering wheel of Brewster, my truck, heading home from doing a food shop at our local Lake WhaddayathinkImean Shop 'n Save, looking at the lovely vista before me, all of the lovely houses and cottages ribboned along our snow-covered lake, when suddenly my mind was overcome with the news of the day, and there before me, was a projection of that news on our village.

I saw Ester and Edward Ashbridge's house, and the Lindsdale's beside theirs, and the Mitchell's, Ming's, and Wayfield's, pounded by non-stop cluster bombs. Generations of hopes, dreams, love, joy, plans for the future. Mothers, fathers, grandparents, uncles, nieces, nephews, brothers, sisters, alive and thriving, now gone, erased, and in their place … broken, burning, smoking rubble.

Just rubble.

Why I had to give my head a shake. Stop thinking those things, Maybelle, I said. I was talking to myself, don'tcha know.

Gasping with relief, like waking from the worst nightmare, the state of Lake W was, as usual, pristine and peaceful. The Ashbridge's, Lindsdale's, Mitchell's, Ming's, and Wayfield's were alive and well and living in their lovely houses that they cherished and cared for, and I would soon be driving up the laneway to my cottage where I felt cushioned from the senseless devastation of a thriving, hard-working, peaceful democracy by one man's crazed desire for power.

Well, if my frustration didn't grow like a big fat goiter, don'tcha know. Knowing this was going on while I was putting my groceries away. Knowing that millions of displaced people, separated from their loved ones, wouldn't be able to do that simple thing for a long time.

So, I called Twindle, and Beanpole, Vilma, Officer McB and Sybil, and I said, we've got to do something. Anything. What can we do? Well, we're raising money, as much as we can and we're sending it to help support the Ukrainian people. Why, those folks are going to need help for a long time. And we feel good about sending it to the organization that Albert Einstein founded called the International Rescue Committee.

But, more than that, we realized that from now on we need to be more vigilant about misinformation that we see and hear on social media and in the news. We have to ask, wait a minute. Who is behind this? Who would benefit from spreading misinformation and dividing us? Weakening our country? Making stuff up to get folks so divided about things that we stop trusting everything we hold near and dear. Even stop trusting our system of government and science. We need to remember to ask: Who is behind this? And start connecting the dots.

As for ol' Maybelle, it makes sense to me to listen to people who have proven to do good for others. Whose message is unifying, inclusive, helpful, supportive, who have good ideas and plans and policies and solutions to make our lives and our world better. Not words that sling mud at others, spread hate, create non-existent enemies. Let's not fall for that.

We talked about Ukraine and how the folks of that country worked together over the past 30 years and turned it into a strong, proud, beautiful, peaceful, thriving democracy. And how important it is to safeguard our democracy, here at home, from those whose aim is to destroy it.

Yep, that's what we decided. To help however we can, and to be vigilant.

Maybelle's Fireside Stories is written by Jerelyn Craden whose novel, "Vessie Flamingo Outshining the Moon," and "Maybelle's Cure for What Ails You" are available at amazon.com.

Moving together with kindness

IF YOU GREW up in the 1980s or 1990s, then I am willing to bet that you have the phrase "be kind, please rewind" tattooed somewhere into your core memories.

I remember going to the video store every Friday night with my family, and spending countless hours perusing the video covers. Nothing felt more gutting than finally finding a cover that resonated with you, only to look behind the case and see that the video had been rented. I remember the excitement of slipping videos into the return chute, and feeling the dime in my palm, growing warmer in my little balled up hand while I aimlessly wandered the rows of movies, waiting for the moment it would finally be set free into the gumball machine at the front desk. Somehow, it always smelled like popcorn. I never saw any popcorn, but it always had that sweet and salty scent.

EMILY STONEHOUSE
Special to County Life

Be kind, please rewind.

There's a good chance that these were the first four words that a millennial learned how to read. This phrase was ingrained in our being, and it was just common knowledge that if you didn't rewind, well, you're just not that kind. No one wants to be friends with someone who doesn't take the time to rewind. It's cool to be kind.

While rewinding seems to be a thing of the past (or maybe not …we all saw what happened to records. I for one am 100 per cent in favour of bringing back the VHS), I can't help but wonder, has being "kind" gone out of style as well?

As these seasons shift and temperatures change, we are not only entering into a new territory of temperatures, but of temperaments. Regulations are being lifted, rules are changing, and life is starting to look a little more like it did in the time of the VHS: seemingly care-free.

We are going to start seeing more smiling faces again, heading back to concerts, live music, dance recitals. Thanks to science and modern medicine, we are shifting into a time that seems like it was "before." Back to that time where we weren't sanitizing every surface. A time where we didn't have the excuse of a mask when we forgot someone's name. A time when we weren't glued to social media, wondering what was next, looking for direction, seeking connection.

While this is the direction we are going, it's important to remember that this is a new chapter. There is some semblance of time gone by, but we are standing on brand new territory, planting a flag of the unknown. When we peel off our masks, what do we have to show underneath? Who is left after two years of living in the unknown?

This chapter of the unknown will pose a whole new set of challenges, of uncertainties. This is the chapter where we, as humans, need to show kindness.

There will be people out there not ready to change.

Let's be kind to them. There will be people wearing masks every day. Let's be kind to them. There will be people who will feel fear. Let's be kind to them. There will be people feeling uncertain and scared. Let's be kind to them. There will be people embracing change in their core. Let's be kind to them. There will be people waiting for the other shoe to drop.

Let's be kind to them. There will be people who are ready to move forward. Remember, let's be kind to them. We have gone through a whole lot of changes since the VHS was phased out. Life has changed, the world has changed, people have changed, means of watching movies has changed. We are in a new chapter of change, of unknown, of uncertainty. Yet we can face forward, together. We no longer need to rewind, but trust me, it's still cool to be kind.

Top 10 signs that spring has really sprung

SPRING IS on its way. The days are getting longer and warmer. The weather is getting milder. Trees are starting to bud. You can see the disaster in the dog pen. But there are other less obvious signs too. Here are my top 10:

1. That puddle you stepped in was actually a neck-deep pothole.
2. The road is so frost-heaved that you even have to walk slower.
3. You can troll while ice fishing.
4. The grouse have practiced so much that they can now do the drum solo for In the Air Tonight.
5. Wild turkeys are making your rooster look lazy.
6. Your dog wants to show you how much mud it can smuggle in the house.
7. Sometimes it doesn't rain. But then it snows.
8. That one guy who is just dying to wear shorts.
9. You're finally forgiven for forgetting Valentine's Day.
10. "The sap is running" is a sentence your neighbours say when they see you have taken up jogging.

Begetting creation

Artists use a tender eye, a soul that sifts in verse

Peace for all the angry and some power for the meek.

The art of mindfulness

MELANIE JONES AND ERIN CURRY

Special to County Life

We often find ourselves going through our days without noticing what we are doing- we are just doing it, as if we have done it many times before. We wake up and do the same routine and often do not recall anything vivid from our morning routine. Our Mindfulness Martial Arts (MMA) program at Point in Time calls this being on autopilot as if we select that from the manual and go about our days.

Mindfulness is the art of being in the present moment, here and now. It's about noticing and fully being aware of what you are doing. Allowing yourself to bring your attention and awareness to an activity, thought, feeling, action and accepting them without judging them as good or bad, just being with them. The MMA program helps to teach participants to shift from autopilot to manual pilot. When we shift to manual pilot it teaches us to notice, be in the present and aware of all that is around us, take in the world a little differently than we did yesterday morning. Noticing how your breakfast tastes, smells, feels as you chew it. Using our breath as an anchor to bring our awareness and attention to walking, eating, doing yoga, running, schoolwork, meditation, martial arts, etc. If only for a few moments, this shift can allow us to practice the art of mindfulness.

When we are mindful, we are more aware of our thoughts, feelings, actions and able to process things differently. Practicing being mindful during pleasant times of our lives helps us to be more mindful when we face challenges and adversity. As we learn to be mindful, we can learn to use our breath and body to anchor ourselves during challenging times and learn to accept that while we may not be able to change the difficult things happening in our world, we can learn to react to them differently.

We offer four different programs at Point in Time Centre for Children, Youth, and Parents and the Haliburton County Youth Wellness Hub:

Mindfulness Martial Arts and Young Warrior Program

Mindfulness Martial Arts (for ages 12 to 18 years) and Young Warriors (for ages eight to 11 years) are unique programs in collaboration with Point in Time, the Child Development Institute-Integra that focus on Mindfulness, Martial Arts, and Cognitive Behavioral Therapy skills. Martial Arts Training is both physical and mental training focusing on developing of mastery, discipline, combative challenge, storytelling, meditation, and participation in community.

Mindfulness Ambassador Program

The Mindfulness Ambassador Program offers individuals a forum to meet face to face and learn about constructive ways to address personal, social and community challenges. The program has basic mindfulness practices that help individuals access wisdom within themselves and within the group. Social and emotional learning is a key element in the program (self awareness, self- management, social awareness, relationship skills and responsible decision making).

This program focuses on the mindfulness practices of Tuza - paying attention to the breath and slowing down before reacting. Like the anchor of a ship, Tuza can be used to steady us in different situations. Even when a big wave of emotion washes over us, we can use our breath to regain a sense of calm and balance.

Dialectical Behavior Therapy

Comprehensive Dialectical Behaviour Therapy helps youth learn new skills and work towards individualized goals through weekly skills groups, individual therapy, and phone coaching. Dialectical Behaviour Therapy is an evidence-based treatment that helps increase capacity to control emotions and behaviours, and to build a life worth living. Mindfulness is a foundational component of this type of therapy.

Interested in joining one of our mindfulness programs? For MMA, Young Warriors, or Mindfulness Ambassador Programs, contact Point in Time directly at info@pointintime.ca, or call 705-457-5345. For more information about Comprehensive Dialectical Behaviour Therapy support, contact the Haliburton Youth Wellness Hub at marys@pointintime.ca or 705-457-2727.

Get to know the Huskies: Peyton Schaly

ALEX GALLACHER

Special to County Life

Since being added to the Huskies roster following a trade with the Wellington Dukes, Peyton Schaly has been a force on the Huskies offensive line. With nine goals and 16 points in 22 games, the player from Barrie, Ontario has loved his time in Haliburton County, but said playing hockey is about a love for the sport.

Coming from a hockey family, Schaly found his love of the game from his dad and uncle, who were both high level players when he was a young boy. Schaly started to play hockey at a very young age, growing up with a backyard rink. Finding his footing in the OJHL (Ontario Junior Hockey League) shortly after, big things were on the horizon.

"When I was little my dad and my uncle both played hockey," Schaly said. "We lived right beside each other so we always had a backyard rink growing up."

Starting out his career with the Brockville Braves of the CCHL (Central Canada Hockey League), Schaly played in the OJHL starting in 2018. First with the Aurora Tigers, then joining the Collingwood Blues/Colts, Schaly moved over to the Wellington Dukes before being traded to the Huskies alongside Cameron Kosurko and Jonah Cochrane.

"I started when I was 17, " Schaly added. "I was in the CCHL before being traded to Aurora. I've been on a couple of teams since, and it's a great league and I've enjoyed playing in it."

Last year, on Nov. 4, Schaly was added in the aforementioned trade from Wellington. Having played the Huskies as a member of the Dukes, moving to a new team within the division was daunting, but overall very exciting.

Coming over with two of his teammates, the change in both fan attendance and teammates as a whole was a very exciting experience for Schaly.

"I was a very excited to find out I was traded here," Schaly said. "It's a great group of guys and great fans. It's a great atmosphere with great coaching, the energy on the ice and in the room makes it an amazing place to play."

Following his hockey career with the Huskies, Schaly plans to continue playing. As of 2022-23, he will be heading to the NCAA (National Collegiate Athletic Association) D3 to play with the Plymouth State Panthers in New Hampshire. Assuming that goes well, Schaly wants to go pro after graduation. Looking at a career in Europe or a possibly a career in the ECHL (East Coast Hockey League) or AHL (American Hockey League), it doesn't appear he will be putting down a hockey stick anytime soon.

His preferred country is one that is famous for automotive manufacturer Mercedes-Benz and Oktoberfest.

"My uncle played in Germany," Schaly said. "So my goal is to follow him over there, he also played D3 as well. So I really do hope to follow the path he kinda laid out."

During a season of highs, Schaly's favourite moment of the season so far was his first home goal as a member of the Huskies on Dec. 17 against the Toronto Jr Canadiens. Schaly was blown away by the atmosphere. The S.G. Nesbitt Memorial Arena is usually packed to the brim with fans, eager to watch the Huskies play.

Schaly's goal ended up being the one goal the Huskies needed to pull out the win that night, and he never did forget that moment.

Haliburton County Huskies forward Payton Schaly has appreciated the support of the fans and the community. Schaly's love of hockey comes from his father and uncle. /DARREN LUM Staff

"The energy here is insane," Schaly added. " When you score a goal here the bench gets fired up. The crowd's energy is unreal, and to be honest it's one of the best feelings ever. I love the rink, it always looks packed every night. You feel like the fans are on top of you and it's amazing."

Playing with the Huskies is an honour unlike no other. Wearing the Huskies' crest on his chest is something that only a handful of guys get to do on a regular basis. For Schaly, being a Huskies' player is more than just hockey. It's family.

"It's an honour," Schaly said. "The town loves you, you gotta represent the team very well. I think that one of the best things about playing here."

Like a few members of the Huskies, Schaly does have a special talent. If his hockey career ever doesn't work out, a career as a carnie might be on the horizon.

"I'm a pretty good juggler." Schaly said with a laugh.

Local Landmark Mystery

Local Landmark reveal: Working the Jam. This metal and concrete sculpture sits along the lake walk in the village of Haliburton. Created by sculptor Sam Moligian for the Visual Arts Committee, this sculpture commemorates the logging heritage of the Haliburton Highlands. The metal cutouts and concrete logs show the process of loosening a log jam, a vital part of moving cut timber through the waterways and to the mills. Often romanticized, "working the jam' was highly skilled and incredibly dangerous work. Information republished with permission and photo submitted by Thom Lambert.

The following are images of a local landmark. Try to guess what the landmark is and look for the reveal in next week's County Life. Concept and images from Thom Lambert, who shares informative posts about things to see and do in the Highlands through @myhaliburtonhighlands on Instagram. /Submitted by Thom Lambert

Bruce Henry elected new ATRO president

At the annual convention of the Association of Tourist Resort Operators held at the Westbury Hotel in Toronto last week Bruce Henry of Halimar Resort on Lake Kashagawigamog was elected president of this province-wide association.

He will preside over 19 Directors chosen from over 200 member resorts in Ontario.

Bruce has always been active in our community having served on the School Board, the Chamber of Commerce the Lake Kashagawigamog Tourist Association as well as active participation in the affairs of the Anglican Church of Haliburton.

Bruce and his wife Marion have operated Halimar Resort for 25 years and Bruce has served in every capacity on the Board of A.T.R.O. since becoming a director 20 years ago.

Also elected from the Haliburton area were Dale Anthes of Maple Sands, Director. Eileen Crawford of Hart Lodge, Secretary and Art Ward of Wig-a-Mog Inn, First Vice President.

Studio Lab Theatre will perform in schools

Haliburton County Libraries in co-operation with the Haliburton County Board of Education will be presenting a performance of "Huckleberry Finn" by Studio Lab Theatre on March 17 at Archie Stouffer Public School at 9:15 am and Haliburton Senior Elementary School at 2 pm. The public is invited and free tickets are available from any public library.

Huckleberry Finn's rebellious attitude towards being washed and dressed is shared by all children, and in this production they can sing out with Huck and express their dislikes.

They can also fantasize about running away from home with our hero. The fact that Huck leaves with Jim, an escaped slave raises the issue of laws as opposed to morality. This is as timely today as it was when Mark Twain wrote of his concern about slavery in the adventure stories of Tom Sawyer and his gang.

All the action takes place in the midst of the warnings and hallelujahs from the audience.

Until 1970, Studio Lab Theatre was one of the foremost experimental and children's theatres in the city of Toronto. With its exciting productions of Dionysus in '69, The Brothers, and many others, Studio Lab Theatre was instrumental in introducing audience participation in theatre to Toronto audiences.

In the four years since 1970, Studio Lab has conducted touring activities throughout the province of Ontario. In-residence programmes in communities such as Peterborough and Cochrane, as well as workshop activities for many agencies and organizations throughout Ontario have familiarized many with the techniques developed through its productions.

In addition, Studio Lab had the honour to present Alladin in Venice, Italy, for the Biennale Festival, as well as visiting the T.A.F.I. Festival in Wolfville, Nova Scotia.

Wins nomination

Eakins predicts Liberal victory

It took two ballots to make the choice, but when the final vote was tablutated John Eakins was announced the new Liberal candidate for the Victoria-Haliburton riding.

The first vote at last night's nomination meeting at the Academy Theatre was void because none of the three candidates acquired one - half the ballots plus one. Douglas Fisher, the low man in the count, was then disqualified and the 535 voters went onto give Mr Eakins the required majority over the third candidate, Lindsay mayor David Logan.

Mr Eakins is optimistic about the chances of the Liberal party in the anticipated upcoming election.

He said judging by the response he has received and the large turnout at the meeting despite unfavorable weather conditions, "it's the start of a new day for the Liberal party, especially in this riding."

Mr Eakins, who was defeated provincially in 1967 and 1971, remarked he has "never experienced the enthusiasm" now prevailing in the riding even in areas where the Liberals had not received support in other years.

The former Lindsay mayor pointed to the "deep - seated rot of the (Premier William) Davis regime" as the reason for the change of sentiments.

The premier, he said, only knows the riding at election time and "takes us all for granted." The riding has been "too faithful and it's being used.

"Victoria-Haliburton needs a strong representative voice at Queen's Park," he said. "The (governmental) system must be reviewed and overhauled."

David Logan, who was escorted to the podium by a small but rousing fanfare of placards, drums, horns and marching young people, illustrated a similar strain of throught.

"What is going on in the provincial government today is out and out wrong," he told the meeting.

"I do not have all the answers, but I know we can make a good start if we just start treating people like human beings again and stop thinking of them as part of the Big Blue Machine."

He advocated helping farmers before they go bankrupt by "increasing assistance in the cost of producing, especially on machinery and parts."

He insisted the government should stop studying housing problems in the riding and do something to help the people.

Douglas Fisher, a Lindsay chartered accountant and newcomer to the political scene, said the riding needed a candidate to "unshackle Victoria - Haliburton from a lengthy term of Tory bondage."

"I'm sure (Liberal leader) Bob Nixon will look after Mr Davis in the next election," he said. "It's up to us to look after Victoria-Haliburton."

He said although he had no experience to match the other candidates, his freedom from other political encounters, could give him the advantage. Also he explained his day to day work offered him contact with local persons and their problems.

Government must be restored to people: Campbell

"We must restore the government to the people of this province," according to St. George MPP Margaret Campbell.

Speaking at the Victoria-Haliburton Liberal nomination meeting last night, she said local autonomy must take precedence over the centralized decision - making of Queen's Park.

She suggested a review of regional governments at work in the province before more are instigated to "be sure the people run and develop their own community within the development plan at the provincial level."

She also criticized the Conservative government's treatment of farmers.

"It's a disgrace for the province to go more and moe into the food importing business," she told the gathering. Not only does it hurt the farmers locally, but the states the government is importing form, are feeling a strain on their ability to export.

She pointed to land banking as another problem.

"Priceless agricultural land is being held fallow while decisions are being made," she said. No houses are put on it and no food is produced.

The pressures of housing must also be eased, she advocated. And the community must be outfitted to handle hospital patients who no longer need active treatment. However she stressed they should be health problems, not welfare.

She congratulated the Liberal association for its large turn-out at the meeting in "this great Tory stronghold" (formerly held by the late provincial premier Leslie Frost).

But, she stressed, "we will not win the next election by sitting back and waiting for the plums to fall into our hands."

Pancake Festival planned

Again this year the Main Street of Haliburton will be the scene of activity on Easter Saturday when the Lake Kashagawigamog Tourist Association will be busy cooking up their famous flapjacks. This energetic group will be hoping for a repeat of the beautiful spring weather which made last year's festival so successful. There will be stacks of flapjacks and plenty of that famous Highlands Maple Syrup, fresh creamery butter and steaming hot coffee for everyone.
